Traffic to Landscape Curbing Search Site Grows this Spring

With the warming trend in the weather and the economy, visitors to the web's search directory for landscape curbing contractors has risen steadily this spring. The site www.CurbingLocator.org was launched in October 2008 in order for residential and commercial property owners to find qualified local curbing contractors. After a relatively quiet winter, traffic to the site has exploded, recording over 248,000 hits and close to 50,000 page views this year. The site allows visitors to search their zip code for the closest TYGAR Certified Contractor, a designation provided only to those who have completed TYGAR's curb training program. Once on the site, visitors can also learn about all aspects of curbing, including installation methods, means of water diversion and erosion prevention, various aesthetic qualities of curbing, and advantages over other types of edging. There is also a picture gallery which provides ideas on how curbing might fit for a given residence or commercial property.

This increased traffic supports the fact that popularity continues to grow for landscape curbing. The site services both the United States and Canada, and the source of inquiries seems to come from virtually every state and province. And according to TYGAR, curbing contractors all over North America are very busy this spring, with more work than most can get to. In fact, many contractors have backlogs of four weeks or more.
